Light bulb manufacturers determine the average life of a bulb by lighting

100 bulbs and waiting until half of them burn out. The average life indicator is only a guide. If your bulb burns out before the average life, it may have experienced vibration, on/off cycles or voltage surges — factors that affect lamp life.

Did you know?

Light bulb manufacturers determine the average life of a bulb by lighting 100 bulbs and waiting until half of them burn out. The average life indicator is only a guide. If your bulb burns out before the average life, it may have experienced vibration, on/off cycles or voltage surges — factors that affect lamp life.

FULL SPECTRUM BULBS SEE AND FEEL BETTER
Like water and food the body uses light in a variety of metabolic processes. Light penetrates the retina and stimulates essential biological functions. Our inability to perceive colors adequately, as is the case on a grey winter day or under poor artificial lighting conditions can negatively affect our mood and energy level. Interlight's Full Spectrum bulbs utilize rare-earth neodymium which absorbs the dulling yellow part of the spectrum, thereby strengthening the violet, blue, green and red components. The resulting purer, whiter light more closely duplicates natural daylight which reduces eye strain and fatigue, increases alertness, improves color perception and may diminish or eliminate depressing winter days. This type of full spectrum bulb does not enhance photographs, full spectrum lamps are a little dimmer than standard lamps.
